

Family & Medical Leave

The federal Family & Medical Leave Act (FMLA) and Wisconsin Family & Medical Leave Act (WFMLA) are leave entitlements that enable an eligible employee to balance work and family responsibilities by taking job-protected unpaid leave for specified family and/or medical reasons. Employees can choose to be paid during an approved FMLA leave and use sick leave or other accrued paid leave.

Key Points

Communication Timeline

- Employer has 5 business days to respond to an employee when they become aware an employee needs an FMLA leave
- Employee has up to 15 calendar days to complete and return their medical certification form
- If certification forms are returned incomplete or with insufficient information, employer must notify the employee of the clarification needed and allow the employee 7 calendar days to correct any deficiencies
- Employer must approve or deny WFMLA/FMLA leave request within 5 business days of receiving completed medical certification form

Clarification: Obtaining the information needed to designate leave under FMLA

- By giving the employee a letter to take to their treating specialist when medical certification is incomplete or insufficient. Employee has 7 calendar days to correct any deficiencies.
- By contacting the treating specialist to understand handwriting on the medical certification or to understand the meaning of a response. No additional medical information may be requested.

Authentication: Providing a copy of the medical certification and asking for verification that information contained on the certification form was completed and/or authorized by the treating specialist who signed. The employee's permission is not required. No additional medical information may be requested.

Under no circumstances may an employee's direct supervisor contact the employee's treating specialist.

Designation: Employer is responsible for notifying employee within 5 business days of receiving completed medical certification form when FMLA leave is designated and when FMLA leave cannot be designated. Note: An employer can designate FMLA without the employee's approval or submittal of medical certification. This can occur when the employer knows that an eligible employee is going to be out of work, and the employer has sufficient information to know that it is for an FMLA covered reason.

Retroactive Designation: Provided it does not cause harm or injury to the employee, with appropriate notice an employer may designate an earlier, qualifying leave as FMLA leave Leave without Pay (LWOP): If some or all of the FMLA leave will be unpaid, the employee should complete a leave without pay request form. An employer may complete the form.

Medical Release to Return to Work: Requiring receipt of a medical release, prior to the employee returning to work, is recommended. If required, the employee must be notified of this requirement in writing when FMLA leave is designated, and the employee's position description or a list of essential functions of the employee's position must be included.

Recertification:

A. More than 30 days:

- Every six months in connection with an absence (even if medical certification indicates that the employee will need intermittent or reduced schedule leave for a longer period -- e.g., for a lifetime condition)
- If the medical certification indicates the minimum duration of the condition is more than 30 days, an employer must wait until that minimum duration expires before requesting a recertification, unless Section B applies.

B. Less than 30 days:

- Circumstances described by the previous certification have changed significantly (e.g., duration or frequency of absences, nature or severity of the illness, complications, etc.)
- Employer receives information that casts doubt upon the employee's stated reason for the absence or the continuing validity of the certification.
- Employee requests an extension of the leave

C. 30 days:

- No more often than every 30 days and only in conjunction with an absence, unless A or B apply.

Count WFMLA and FMLA leave concurrently when the reason for leave is covered under both acts.

Reasonable Accommodation: When an employee requests medical leave, consider whether reasonable accommodation can be offered as a (voluntary) alternative to FMLA. Medical documentation may indicate restrictions during intermittent or reduced schedule leave, or at the end of a continuous leave. Initiate the reasonable accommodation process to determine whether reasonable accommodation(s) can be made.

Worker's Compensation (WC): Employee or employer may choose to have employee's FMLA 12-week entitlement run concurrently with a WC absence when the injury meets criteria for a serious health condition.

ICI: During an FMLA leave for the employee's own serious health condition, ICI may replace a portion of an enrolled employee's wages. Contact Benefits Services for more information benefits@ohr.wsic.edu

Faculty/Academic Staff/Limited Medical Certification Policy: An employee with approved FMLA leave is not required to provide additional medical certification for absences > 5 consecutive full working days. Intermittent leave under FMLA/WFMLA should be reported in number of actual hours absent from work and not in typical 4 or 8 hour increments.

Paid Leave: FMLA and WFMLA allow for unpaid leave. Employees may choose to use sick leave or other accrued paid leave while taking FMLA/WFMLA. UW-Madison does not have a policy requiring employees to use paid leave during an approved leave under FMLA/WFMLA if he or she wishes to take the leave unpaid.

6 Month Unpaid Leave: Count the 6 month leave without pay simultaneously with continuous leave and leave on a reduced schedule (www.ohr.wisc.edu/polproced/CPMP/cppp_chapter16-03.pdf)
